Enterprise class community platform at small business prices
Easily establish online communities or offer internal private collaboration

Forums are a great way to help build community & buzz around your products or services. They allow your customers to ask questions, post ideas or suggestions & interact with your company.

Your community allows your organizations to demonstrate your commitment to customers by engaging & providing quick answers to questions.

Your company forums are often the first place your customers will look for solutions to any problems they may encounter with your products.

If your customers can find a solution within your community at the time they need it this greatly increasing customer satisfaction and eliminating the need for the customer to contact support.

Consolidate Customer Feedback

A company discussion forum provides a great opportunity to gather invaluable customer feedback. After all it's your customers using your products everyday and giving them a chance to engage can often result in fresh ideas to help improve your bottom line.

Engage With Customers

Generate a buzz around your products or services. Keep your customers updated with developments via bulk messaging tools or forum announcements. Garner early user feedback through user polls & proactive product discussion.

If customers see your company actively engaging they are more likely to participate within your community & ultimately purchase your products & services.

Support Your Products

InstantForum.NET offers a familiar, easy to use interface & supports several third party login methods out-the-box ensuring your customers can post questions with minimal fuss.

When customers come together you can more easily identify common problems. Using this information you can focus your activities to quickly address customer concerns and publish solutions within your community improving the experience for new customers.

Identify Key Influencers

With InstantForum.NET you can easily identify your key posters & influences. You can reward active members with custom member levels & images. This demonstrates your appreciation to key community members and allows your newer community members to easily identify your staff & key influencers.
